THE HEAD OF JOHN THE BAPTIST. BY FREDERICK BOYD STEVENSON.

I.
Tripping lightly—
Sinuous, fair—
Springing sprightly—
Everywhere;
Purling,
Whirling,
Arms in air;
Mazy,
Hazy,
Grace galore;
Pirouetting, dancing for—
Dancing, madly dancing for—
The head of John the Baptist.
Oh, the spell of sensuous sight
Holds a throne in thrall tonight—
Herod, heart and soul in trance,
Lost in dreamland of the dance.

II.
Winsome, smiling,
Teeth of pearl,
Soft, beguiling
Dancing girl;
Leading,
Pleading—
Brain in whirl—
Tasking,
Asking
Man and king
For the one forbidding thing—
For that awful, ghastly thing—
The head of John the Baptist.
Thus his head on charger laid
At the feet of wanton maid.
Soul and sceptre oft have awayed
At the caprice of maid.

THE MANAGER'S MASCOT.

A STORY OF THE CIRCUS.

BY CHARLES H. DAY.

STARBUCK'S successful career as a circus manager had a romantic phase to it which was little known to a later generation of his employees. But some of the older managers and retired professionals used to refer to the mascot that brought him good fortune. It was a story that could be turned into an advertisement, had known half the truth he would have blazoned the facts to the world even at the risk of his position.

Away back in the days when Starbuck was running an obscure cross road show, and it was his study to keep down the expenses and bolster the receipts, he met with a sudden success which hastened him on the road to fortune at a lively pace. Up to the time of this favorable turn in the affairs of the Starbuck show its growth had been slow, because it was conducted upon the most conservative policy, although every season from the very first had proved profitable.

One of the most substantial of the Eastern magnates who controlled several enterprises said to one of the partners in the syndicate: "Just keep your eye on this man, Starbuck, and make a mental note of what I am telling you. Starbuck is one of the coming men in our line, and is making sure headway every season; he has a level head and never changes the size of his hat."

"Building up a name out West," returned the listener.

"Yes," was the response; "and he is going to be very strong there some day."

"Growing up with the country?"

"That's just it; and one of these days, when some of the high flyers go West, they will find that Starbuck is firmly established and no easy game."

"All his good luck appears to have come with a woman."

"So I have been told."

"Starbuck bills her as 'The Fair Unknown.'"

"Fair Unknown?"

"Yes, Fair Unknown, because no one knows who she is or where she came from."

"What writer got up that yarn? It's a dandy good one."

"No writer got that up, because it is true, and you know yourself that Starbuck indulges in no such luxury as a professional writer."

"Pshaw!"

"There's no paw about it," persisted the magnate. "The woman arrived in New York from Europe, bringing her own horses. Even the groom who accompanied her knew nothing of her professional career, nor of the business, but one who had riding experience was at once secured. All this I found out after her departure from the city. You were with our South American company at the time. Well, shortly after I heard great accounts of a marvelous equestrienne who was riding with Starbuck's little show. We had an idea of touching some of his territory away off there with our Western outfit, but I found that the drives were too long, and roads too poor for such a heavy affair as our trick, and I abandoned the scheme, but not before going on to see Starbuck's little money getter and his famous mascot. I hated to give up the trip, as there were dollars in it, but it was not practicable for us to make the drives. Starbuck could do it, because he was in light marching order, and we were weighed down with chariots, tableaux and big dens. As I prospected the country I ascertained that Starbuck was giving great satisfaction, and that everybody was going into ecstasies over the Fair Unknown, the mysterious equestrienne."

"Great gag."

"I tell you there was no gag about it! Well, at place after place I was told about the woman and her wonderful abilities, until at last I decided to see for myself. A landlord insisted that the equestrienne somersaulted on horseback just like a man, and I said: 'Oh, I guess not,' and he said: 'Oh, I guess yes.'"

"And I say I guess not," interrupted the incredulous partner.

"And I say I guess yes. If you will permit me to tell the story. The landlord asserted, and brought witnesses to aver that 'the gal in Starbuck's show stood on a horse's back and flapped heels over head three times a going.'"

"Then I had to stand up and admit that I was a circus manager, and had never seen a woman execute a somersault on horseback. And then to my

"The same."

"It must be something like that to prevent her bettering herself, and at least engaging with a company that is not overabundantly on the outposts of civilization. Is she a good looker?"

"Young, and an out and out beauty."

"Let's see, this was two years ago that you saw Starbuck's mascot?"

"Two years ago; why do you ask?"

"Because I have never heard of Starbuck's marriage. You say that at the time of your visit they were very much in love with each other?"

"That was evident, and everybody said so."

"Perhaps one or both have met with a change of heart."

and the member of the syndicate wired the head of the combine at New York: "Does not go with Starbuck. Declines all my inducements."

The senior enjoyed the discomfiture of the junior hugely, and after having a good laugh over the telegram he sat down and thought over the situation. The conclusion he arrived at led him to wire his partner: "Stay where you are and await results."

As the manager filed the dispatch he muttered: "Lovers have tiffs."

The junior partner seemed of the same opinion, as he wrote: "I guess that they will make it up and that the mascot will go out with Starbuck the same as usual."

"Oh, she rode," laughed the partner, adding: "And somersaulted."

The senior looked incredulously at his partner, until the latter explained: "Oh, she just wouldn't be discharged, that's all."

"And she's still riding with Starbuck?"

"That is just what."

"And Starbuck is in love with the woman?"

"As sure as you are born."

"And why don't he marry her?"

"And why don't you answer your own question?"

The partners looked at each other for a moment, and then one said: "Hugh!" and the other said: "Hum!"

That circus season passed away with nothing but glowing accounts of Starbuck's success in the West, a financial triumph largely attributed in professional circles to his famed mascot, the Fair Unknown. During the ensuing Winter Starbuck came on to New York to buy some wild animals and contract for printing, and, as usual, made a friendly call at the headquarters of the syndicate. In the course of the conversation the head of the syndicate, who was old enough to take liberties, asked in a jocular way:

"Say, Starbuck, why don't you marry that equestrienne of yours?"

"There is an impediment," was the frank answer.

The inquisitive circus magnate made no further inquiry.

It is hardly necessary to state that the syndicate made no further endeavor to secure the services of the Fair Unknown. Neither did Manager Starbuck endeavor to force events by failing to contract with a rider who rode whether she was engaged or not.

So the Starbuck show continued to go out and in until the manager announced, one Fall:

"This is the last of the wheels. The show has outgrown the wagons. I'll have a train built in the Spring, and hereafter go by rail."

Starbuck's rivals nearly all agreed that said Starbuck was essentially and altogether a wagon showman, and one alone fitted for the crossroad. But the shrewd members of the syndicate knew differently, and exclaimed:

"Look out for Starbuck!"

That is what they said and meant, and they took the warning to themselves, and, as a rival with a mascot, held Starbuck not lightly. Starbuck's new departure was eminently successful, and the entire season on the tracks passed with but a single accident. When the news of the tragedy reached New York the senior of the syndicate and the junior started in at the same breath to tell each other the story.

Starbuck ran all the season until making the last stand, and then the train killed a tramp that was stealing a ride.

"The train was brought to a stop, and almost the first person at the side of the dying man was the Fair Unknown. He recognized her, uttered two words: 'Forgive me,' and died."

"That was the impediment."

"To be sure. The equestrienne had the conscientious scruples of her religion, and would not secure a divorce to wed Starbuck, the man she loved."

"And the man that loved her."

"I suppose that the woman's former husband was of no account, and she escaped from him to America and buried herself in Starbuck's out West cross road show?"

"That is certain enough."

"Just as certain as it is that in due time the Fair Unknown will become Mrs. Joshua Starbuck, and the ring will lose its brightest star."

"Can have no other result."

Thus the senior and the junior of the syndicate were agreed.

CORRECT BREATHING.

The supplying of oxygen is not the only function, although it is the most direct and vital one of proper breathing. Thorough expansion of the chest insures the proper filling of the lungs with air, dilates all the minute air cells, especially those at the summits of the lungs, where motion is least and where the seeds of consumption are usually first planted, and increases the circulation of the blood throughout all parts of these organs.

Still another effect of proper breathing is a beautifying one. The chest is broadened, the shoulders are thrown back, the figure is erect and the carriage graceful.

Perfect breathing is not natural to most men and women of sedentary occupation and indoor life. Like all good things, it must be worked for, and the work must be persevered until full and deep respiration has become a habit.

The means of attaining this object are various and cannot be recounted here, but they are all based upon the principle of removing permanently every obstacle to the free entrance of air into the lungs.

School children sitting at their desks, clerks bending over their ledgers, seamstresses at work with the needle or the sewing machine, typewriters and all who must stoop as they earn their daily bread, should learn to stop from time to time, to sit back in the chair, or rise, throw back the shoulders and draw in ten or twelve deep, slow respirations, holding the breath for three or four seconds each time the lungs are filled.

These exercises, like breathing in general, should always be done with the mouth closed, for the nose is the only proper channel for the passage to and fro of the air. A school teacher who will interrupt the studies once every hour through the season and teach the class to do this breathing exercise will be contributing more than she can ever realize to the future well being of her youthful charges.—Youth's Companion.

HARRIETT MACDONALD

discomfiture a jay of the hayseed variety laughed outright and observed:

"Guess, mister, you never sawn Starbuck's show; it's a hummer."

"As soon as I was convinced that there was such a prodigy as a somersaulting equestrienne, I was determined not only to see her, but to engage her for the following season, if possible. Accordingly, I made hot foot for Starbuck's show across the country, as there was no reaching him by rail."

"And when you got there you found that the woman didn't 'top.'"

"And when I got there I found that the woman did somersault on horseback."

"With the horse standing still?"

"No, siree! With the horse in rapid motion."

"By Jove! and you failed to engage her?"

"Failed," returned the magnate in disgust.

"Didn't offer her money enough?" sarcastically observed the partner.

"Humph!" returned the head of the syndicate. "Money was no object with that woman."

"A woman, and didn't care for money?"

"Just the size of it. That, too, was one of the mysteries of the Fair Unknown. As cash or argument made no impression on her, I came to a conclusion."

"And that was?"

"That the woman is in love with her manager."

"And that the manager is in love with the mysterious and accomplished lady."

"And if they have?"

"I am going to see if I can't have better luck than you did. I'm going to visit the Fair Unknown, and make her a proposition for next season."

The head of the syndicate shook his head doubtfully and ejaculated, "Nah!"

Within a week the junior partner packed his valise and made a rapid flight West. Of course he was too well known to attempt any concealment, so he made a call on Starbuck on his arrival, and even went so far as to state the object of his mission.

"Starbuck, I'm after your mascot."

"I have no mascot," replied Starbuck.

"I mean the Fair Unknown," said the visitor.

"I have no claim on the lady for next season," was the surprising response. "As far as I am concerned she is very much at liberty."

The member of the syndicate was so astonished that he was quite speechless. When he recovered he turned the conversation to other topics, and at his first convenience ended the interview, that he might at once seek the object of his journey.

"Plain sailing now," declared the visitor, as he sped from Starbuck.

But it was not, for in an hour the man of over confidence was aground, hard and fast.

The Fair Unknown was neither engaged for the next season, nor wanted to be. His inducements, arguments and blandishments were of no avail. Every proposition was politely and firmly declined,

A fortnight later he again wrote: "Here I am, and no nearer accomplishing anything more than at my last writing. I believe that both the parties are very much in love with each other, but that the woman will not consent to marriage. It is believed by those who know them best that Starbuck is endeavoring to bring the matrimonial matter about by not giving her an engagement with the show. As I have fooled so much time here now I shall remain until Starbuck's show opens, and after that will go direct to New York, with or without the Fair Unknown."

On his return trip to New York the junior of the combine was unaccompanied. He explained to the head of the syndicate: "As I wrote in my last letter I stopped over to see Starbuck's opening performance, and he was extra courteous, and we went into the reserved seats together to enjoy the performance. It was a good, clean, smooth show, of more than average excellence, and the Fair Unknown on horseback was the best equestrienne I ever saw step into the ring."

The head of the syndicate just jumped up at that and cried: "But you wrote she was not engaged to Starbuck?"

"She was not," coolly replied the junior.

"And she rode at the first performance, you say?"

"As much to Starbuck's astonishment as my own."

"She rode! she rode! she rode!" the senior continued to exclaim.

Baseball

PLAYERS OF 1899

Sketch of the Short Stops
Last Season's Fielding Performance
In reviewing the short stops of the year we will name the clubs alphabetically one on the list is Baltimore, which is in that position. They were Magroons The first named, who also played as participated in cue hundred and twenty slip contests with the two teams, a very creditable fielding feats. While more he once accepted all except one chances, once all of eleven chance, cept one of eleven chances, twice all once all except one of ten chances, nine chances. After he joined the Chicago had four puts out and nine assists, seven and seven assists, once he aced pt one of ten chances and five chances. His batting average was .249, he was placed at third field after his Chicago, took over in ninety came tests in that position and made a throwing. His best fielding performance accepting all of ten chances and accepting all of nine chances in a stronghold, however, in battle handied and thirty-four champion huddled and he had a batting performance started out at a very fast pace. He safe hits in his first twelve games he made eleven hits, and made ten hits. Sept. 20 to Oct. 9, in seven consecutive games he made five four safe hits in his sixteen times he had three at short. Boston had four, but it was not too times last season, but it was not too promising in the hope of obtaining the case with some of the other players. Boston had the other three on a ball field, and the other three in cases of emergency. Herard star player in every way, characterized in three ways, carelessness, reckless, foolish, and makes plays that must be seen to be appreciated descriptions of him are abundant and sensational features. He performed and forty-two championship is quite commensurate with him, his remarkable performance making straight games without making mistakes. His best fielding work was once caught one of fourteen chances, or twice all of eleven, once ten hits in nine chances to give him a safe hit to a game. His safe hits were shared and five games were taken when did not participate in being an official rating.

Brooklyn found it necessary one time or another, as short season. This was because of lack in the hope for some years Long time of players. He was hit within a reason of action, and some of his plays passed upon in the field, he was equalled. However, his arm would back on him, and his position. Then Casey, who was tied there, but failed to be shifted over there, he gave satisfaction there, he stays in that position, the te three chances without a misplay. His batting average was .372 in one hundred and thirty-one contests. Schiebeck, who has had a rather varied career since he began playing ball, took part in twenty-seven championship games as a shortstop after he joined the team late in the season. His best fielding feats were once accepting all of ten chances and once nine chances to a game. His batting percentage for the same number of games was .287.

OFFICIAL FIGURES

Batting Averages of the New York State League Players for 1899.

President Farrell, of the New York State League has compiled the batting averages of the players who participated in more than ten championship games during the season of 1899. Tall, who led the list, took part in only thirteen contests. In one game he made seven hits and in another five, which gave him a big start. Whistler, who comes next, participated in only two games, while C. Hill, who played in ninety-four games, ranks third. The averages on the whole are much better than the averages in 1898, and the season of 1899, Farrell does not give the name of the team or teams in which the players were members of. It is altogether clear that this was far from being complete. The figures follow:

Word comes from St. Louis that Harry Dooms, ex-professional pitcher, died recently in that city. He hailed from the Mound City, where he gained quite a local reputation as a pitcher. He pitched in 1886 here with the Leavenworth pitcher. In 1886 he was with the Leavenworth team of the Western League. He began the season of 1887 with the Leavenworth, but was afterwards sent to Kansas City and Topeka, before the campaign ended. In 1888 he was with the Newark team of the Central League, and took part in fifteen championship contests. In the official batting averages for several years he was in the official batting averages of the National League. In 1890 the Newark club was a member of the Atlantic Association, and he continued with its team. The year he he participated in five championship games, and stood eleventh in the official batting averages of that association, with a percentage of 25.7. He showed signs of weakening, and the following year he played in the outfield for the Newark team. He went back to his home town, and for the next four or five years he played only with semi-professional teams from the Mound City. His work during the first two seasons with Newark was of a high order that his services were in great demand by the clubs of the leading professional leagues, and it is stated that the Philadelphia Club once offered New-

Timothy McGinley, who caught New Haven's professional team in 1876 and filed the same position for the Boston and afterwards the St. Louis teams of the National League, in 1876, died recently of consumption in California.

World of Players.

Stall, the pictures, in conjunction with the act, proved decided novelty.

Karl Millochevsky, the composer, is suffering from paralytic stroke. His condition is critical.

John S. Leon, pianist and musical director, who closed with "Peck's Bad Boy" Dec 8, has joined Billy Carter company, playing in Canada.

Chas K. Harris writes: "I have won my suit against Mylla Bros., and they had to destroy their plates in the case."

Theatrical.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington.—The last week of the year, although prolific in excellent attractions at our playhouses, was only moderately successful from the box office point of view. Even the Henry Irving engagement fell considerably short of what was expected, and Blasco's new comedy was voted rather mild and disappointing. The press' scorings of some few rather risqué situations did not attract the curiosity of the public enough to more than completely fill the auditorium. Much may be done, however, by the author, to bring the comedy up to the New York City requirements before its coming production at the Herald Square, to insure the run which the author hopes for.

NATIONAL THEATRE (W. H. Ranney, manager).—Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, in "The Ediths of the House," is the present week's attraction. Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry played "Robespierre," "The Merchant of Venice," "The Amber Heart," and "Nance Oldfield" (double bill), and "Waterloo" and "The Belle" (double bill), at advanced prices, but the house was at no time crowded except in "The Merchant of Venice" nights, and then the public was somewhat disappointed owing to the non-appearance of Miss Terry as Portia on account of a sudden indisposition, but her part, however, was very successfully filled by an understudy, Jacob Litt's "Sporting Life" 8-12.

COLUMBIA THEATRE (Luckett & Dwyer, managers).—The Jefferson De Angelis Opera Co., in "The Jolly Musicians," is billed for the present week. David Blasco's new comedy, "Nashby Anthony," received its first production on any stage last week at this house, but did not come up to the expectation of either its author or of the patrons of the house, and as a consequence seats were to be had at every performance. The company is an excellent one throughout and the comedy is a beautifully mounted. "A Runaway Girl," Jan. 8-12.

LAFAYETTE SQUARE OPERA HOUSE (W. H. Painter, manager).—A fine production of "Princess Alice," in opera costume, by Kirtle La Shelle, and music by Julian Edwards, is the present week's attraction. Among the cast appear the names of Richard Goetz, J. C. Miron, Harry Bow, Will Mandell, Winfield Blake, Edward Temple, W. A. Lammie, Minnie Method, Louis Hepler and Mathilda Preville, besides an ensemble of nearly one hundred persons. Robert Mantell, in "The Dagger and the Cross," played to fair business only last week. "A Bachelor's Housewife" 8-12.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC (W. H. Ranney, manager).—Gillette's "Secret Service" is being presented this week. Last week those Melville pleasures, quite good sized audiences, in her unique presentation of "Sis Hopkins," "A Texas Star" 8-12.

LYCEUM THEATRE (Eugene Keroan, manager).—Sam Devere's Own Co., is on this week. Last week, Al. Revere's big bill, with King, Moser, and played to good business. Hopkins' Trans-Oceanic Co. 8-12.

NEW GRAND (Burke & Chase, managers).—The present week's bill at this house includes Wormwood's Dog and Monkey Show, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Barry, M. Scay and Anita Hendrie, Carl Dammas troupe, Arthur Rieley, Mathews and Harris, a twelve new pictures in the biograph. Last week the houses were well filled. The Joseph Hart All Star Vaudeville Co. is booked for 8-12, and Ching Ling Foo is booked for 15-20.

BLUET THEATRE (Wm. W. Wellington, manager).—The old year was ushered out by the last Sunday night concert to be given in this house and was well attended. The present week's bill is headed by the Braumert Sisters, followed by Stewart and Gillen, Julia Rose, Dolly and Hilton, Ad Carlisle, Hertel and Abbott and the Hilton stock. The last week was fully up to its predecessors and business was excellent.

CONVENTION HALL (O. H. Butler, manager).—The many pictures of the Jeffries-Sharkey fight were well patronized last week.

NORRIS.—Kate Davis, of "A Chinese Romance" Co., which stranded here three weeks ago, was stricken with paralysis on the opening night and was taken in an unconscious condition to Providence Hospital, and the sisters in charge of that institution were instructed to give her every care necessary. Since that time no one has visited the hospital nor have her friends been heard from. She has been removed to the free ward and is receiving every attention usually accorded a free patient, but she has few lucid moments and cannot give the names of her friends in order that they may be written to. It is hoped that this may reach the notice of some one acquainted with her or her friends so that professional aid may be aroused in her case. Mrs. David Towers, wife of David Towers of the "Big Hur" Co., is somewhat improved from the effects of an operation performed on her for appendicitis, as noticed in my last week's letter, but is still critically ill. This may meet her husband's eye, as three letters written him on the subject have not met with any notice on his part, if received.

OREGON.

Portland.—At the Marquam Grand (Calvin Bell, manager) Eugene Blair presented "A Lady of Quality" Dec. 18-20, to good business. "Shenandoah" opens Dec. 21, for the week. "Greater America" comes Jan. 1, Stanford Glee Club 3, and University of Oregon Glee Club 6.

CORDEY'S THEATRE (John F. Cordray, manager).—"Human Hearts" played to good business week of Dec. 17. Johnnie and Emma Ray come week of Dec. 18. "A Hot Hot Hot" will be followed Jan. 1 by "The Hot Hot Hot in Dixie."

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE (Clarence H. Jones, manager) is dark.

FREDERICKSBURG MUSIC HALL (Grant & Brown, managers).—The Laurence, Divine Dodson, Richard Robinson, Chas. H. Whiting and Zoua.

HERNANTON SCHOTT concluded his series of six German song recitals Dec. 26, at Parson's Hall. He was assisted by Mrs. Eleanor Ross and Rebs Hobson, rostrans, with Otilie Schaeckling, pianists.

THEATRE'S NASHVILLE STUDENTS appeared 26, 27, at Arion Hall.

P. C. Wood, late of the Star Theatre, Troy, N. Y., is now property man of the "Wicked London" company.

VICTORY FOR BRAINS AND ORIGINALITY.
JUSTICE REIGNS SUPREME AND RIGHT DOES PREVAIL.
NERVE AND PLUCK HAVE WON THE DAY.

CHAS. K. HARRIS, America's famous song writer, protects his brains. He wins his famous suit against MYLLS BROTHERS, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, of the City of New York, for publishing a steal on his beautiful descriptive song story, "DEAR 'COLLEGE CHUMS," who said their song "College Chums Forever." Mr. Harris went to New York personally to fight this firm, tooth and nail, on their own battle grounds, and fought them to a victory. He battled for his brains, which is his living—and who a score of would be composers and song publishers, not having any brains of their own, tried to steal from him. But Mr. Harris has blocked their game, and he wants all song writers and music publishers to keep their hands off his publications, as he stands ready at any and all times to fight and protect his rights and property from the score of song pirates who feed upon the brains of originality. "Hands off" is Mr. Harris' warning cry. Any song writer or music publisher attempting to perjure or use for their own use, any of the Harris ideas which are embodied in his song compositions now or at any time, will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. Take warning from the above and keep your hands off. We never bluff.
 Extract of the copy of the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Southern District of New York, reads:
 "First: That the electrotype plates and music, entitled 'College Chums Forever,' the publications of which song was sought to be enjoined in the above entitled action, shall be destroyed in the presence of the Complainant or his agent, and in the presence of the Defendants or their agent."
 "That the destruction of said plates and copies of said song, aforesaid, shall be made at the office of Mylls Bros., West 20th St., in the City of New York, on Wednesday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock P. M., Dec. 27, 1900."
 Dated: New York, Dec. 20, 1900.
 Leopold Sondheim, Solicitor for Complainant; James Foster Milliken, Solicitor for Defendants.

ROSTER FRENCH'S NEW SENSATION

IDA FRENCH and CLARK McNAIR, RUFF and ORNETTO, CARMILLI and LUCILLE, OSCAR KURTZ, The REYNARDS, The GIBSONS, REED and BURGER, FRIEND, FALKENSTEIN and FAITZER, ROBISON, BRADY and MOORE, REDWARD, KNOX and McCOY, on their 31st annual trip South. This boat has been out eight months and is doing a good business. Weather and water favorable. Capt. J. E. McNair, of Columbia, Alabama, will be general manager for French's NEW SENSATION, for the season of '99 and 1900. Capt. A. B. French and Mrs. Callie L. French, the only practical lady captain and pilot in America, will sail for Europe soon, to take in the continent, in search of novelties for the NEW SENSATION.

THE BATON ROUGE DAILY, of the 18th inst., writes: "A large and fashionable audience witnessed the performance at the steamboat landing on Capt. French's floating opera house last night. This old veteran in the show business always brings good troups to our city, and the performance last night was, as is the custom with his shows, first class. The costumes were beautiful, the stage settings and appointments perfect in every detail, and the acting as fine as we ever witnessed here. The orchestra was good and any one wishing to be entertained for three hours should go to the performance, for they will play at the wharf again tonight. We compliment Captain French on the fine set of actresses and actors engaged for this season, the whole lot formed as good a variety show as ever performed at the Capital City."

TAKE NOTICE. We take this means of calling the attention to prospective purchasers that there are a number of machines sold for $35 and $35 for life motion pictures that are only toys, and fit for home use only. We manufacture them on a large scale and supply dealers throughout the country, who place their own name on them. WE DO NOT RECOMMEND THEM FOR PRACTICAL EXHIBITIONS. Write to us for special terms for our wonderful CINEOGRAPH WITH AND WITHOUT STEREOSCOPIC COMBINED, the only practical Life Motion Picture Machine in the World. Lightest in weight, easiest to run, simplest in construction and practically noiseless.
